Abstract	Metonymy is considered as a type of rederivation in the paper. The metonymic senses of polysemantic words and metonymic homonyms are the result of the univerbalization of certain syntactic units. On the content plane the derivatives coincide with the semantics of the syntactic units that had generated them, while their plane of expression is the result of rederivation. The initial lexical unit is a member of the respective syntactic unit or the generating word in oblique syntactic position: e. g. Tvărdica village
